Considering Cultural Context and Safety

All applicants should consider the issues around cultural appropriation if artists they are selecting are using the cultural forms, aesthetics or iconography of cultural communities removed from their social, political and cultural roots. Cultural appropriation can also occur when there is insufficient credit given to the sources of artistic and cultural work. Cultural appropriation can cause harm to Indigenous and diverse communities through misrepresentation and stereotyping. It diminishes access and reduces the opportunity for artists from Indigenous and diverse cultural communities to tell their own stories.

If artists are working with Indigenous peoples, communities, culture or intellectual property (including but not limited to stories, songs, dance, designs, art, traditional knowledge or other cultural expressions), applicants should consider the principles outlined in the United Nations Declaration of the Rights of Indigenous Peoples (the Declaration). The Declaration affirms that Indigenous peoples have the right to self-determination and the right to practice and revive their culture and traditions. As stated in Article 11 of the Declaration,

“This includes the right to maintain, protect and develop the past, present and future manifestations of their cultures, such as archaeological and historical sites, artefacts, designs, ceremonies, technologies and visual and performing arts and literature.”

Article 31 of the Declaration affirms the rights of Indigenous peoples to maintain, control, protect and develop their cultural heritage, traditional knowledge and cultural expressions and their manifestations and intellectual property. If you are working with traditional knowledge, you will need to explain how you have addressed cultural protocols and/or received permissions where required.

When considering which artists and arts experiences to submit with this application, please take cultural safety and appropriation seriously to ensure that students are thoughtfully engaging with traditional knowledge and stories in context. The revised BC curriculum offers an approach that we support:

“It is particularly helpful to co-operate and engage with experts from the community when learning about culture-specific contexts to avoid offence or misrepresentation or appropriation of culture. Cultural appropriation includes use of cultural motifs, themes, “voices,” images, knowledge, stories, songs, drama, and so on without permission or without appropriate context or in a way that may misrepresent the real experience of the people from whose culture they are drawn.”

If you are seeking further clarification on cultural context and safety, we encourage you to reference ArtStarts in Schools’ Anti-Oppression Guidelines. We are grateful for the learnings from our friends at Inner Activist, PeerNet, SOGI 123 and Tierra Negra.

Definition of Professional Artist or Arts Organization

Artists engaged in all funded activities must qualify as practicing, professional artists. A professional artist is defined as someone who has specialized training in the arts (not necessarily in academic institutions); is recognized as a professional by their peers (artists working in the same artistic tradition); is committed to devoting more time to their artistic activity, if financially possible; and has a history of public presentation or publication. (Definition from Canada Council for the Arts)
